

Who were the Gamadin?

Many, many thousands of years ago, before Atlantis flourished, before a horse destroyed an Empire, the Gamadin ruled the cosmos, not in an authoritarian way, but as a protective force against the spreading Death of evil empires and their acts of conquest and domination. A wise and very ancient group of planets formed an alliance to create the most powerful police force the galaxy had ever seen. This police force would be independent of any one state or planet. They were called Gamadin.

Translated from the ancient scrolls of Amerloi, means: "From the center, for all that is good." The Gamadin sole purpose was to protect the freedom and happiness of peaceful planets everywhere, regardless of origin or wealth. It was said that a lone Gamadin ship was so powerful, it could destroy an empire. Unfortunately, after many centuries of peace, the Gamadin had done their job too well. Many saw no reason for such a powerful presence in their own backyard when the Death of war and the aggressive empire building were remnants of an ancient past. So what was left of the brave Gamadin who simply withered away and were lost, never to be heard from again?

However, the ancient scrolls of Amerloi had this warning:

"For it is written that one day the coming Death will lift its evil head and awaken the fearsome Gamadin of the galactic core. And the wrath of the Gamadin will be felt again throughout the stars, and lo, while some people trembled in despair, still more rejoiced; for the wrath of the Gamadin will cleanse the stars for all; and return peace to the heavens..."
